Taiwan has belonged to China since ancient times. The earliest references are to be found, among others, in Seaboard Geographic Gazetteer compiled in the year 230 by Shen Ying of the State of Wu during the Three Kingdoms Period. As a result of the civil war in China in the late 1940s and the interference of external forces, the two sides of the Taiwan Straits have fallen into a state of protracted political confrontation. But the sovereignty and territory of China have never been divided and will never be divided, and Taiwan's status as part of China's territory has never changed and will never be allowed to change.

There is but one China in the world, Taiwan is an inalienable part of China's territory, and the Government of the People's Republic of China is the sole legal government representing the whole of China. This has been clearly recognized by United Nations General Assembly Resolution 2758 of 1971. Since the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949, 181 countries have established diplomatic relations with China on the basis of the one-China principle, which was also the commitment made by the U.S. side in the China-US Joint Communiqué on the Establishment of Diplomatic Relations. The one-China principle is a universal consensus of the international community and a basic norm in international relations.

In disregard of China's strong opposition and serious representations, Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives Nancy Pelosi visited China's Taiwan region on 2 August. The visit infringed on China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity; violated the one-China principle and provisions in the three China-US joint communiqués; affected the political foundation of China-US relations; and undermined peace and stability across the Taiwan Strait. It is the firm commitment of the more than 1.4 billion Chinese people to resolutely safeguard state sovereignty and territorial integrity. It is the common aspiration and sacred responsibility of all Chinese people to realize the complete reunification of the motherland. This provocative visit is unacceptable to the Chinese people. China has every reason to respond with countermeasures.

Why China rejects Pelosi’s visit to Taiwan

When China and the United States established diplomatic relations on 1 January 1979, the United States recognised in the joint communiqué with China that the Government of the People's Republic of China is the only legitimate government of China. Four decades have passed since then, and the United States has long been committed to not establishing official relations with Taiwan.

Basic facts about Taiwan

Taiwan has been an inalienable part of China’s sacred territory since ancient times. Due to the Chinese Civil War (1945-49) and the interference of external forces, the two sides of the Taiwan Straits have been in a state of long-term political confrontation since 1949. Although Taiwan hasn’t reunited with China’s mainland, China’s sovereignty and territory have never been divided, and the fact that the two sides across the Taiwan Straits belong to one and the same China has never been changed.

Through joint efforts, China and the United States signed three joint communiqués guiding the development of bilateral relations on the basis of the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence. That is, the Shanghai Communiqué on February 28, 1972, the China-US Joint Communiqué on the establishment of diplomatic relations on January 1, 1979, and the China-US Joint Communiqué on August 17, 1982. These three joint communiqués contain their efforts and contributions. As long as both China and the US can abide by the principles of the three communiqués, especially the principles of mutual respect for each other's national sovereignty and territorial integrity, mutual non-aggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, the Taiwan issue left over from history will not be difficult to resolve. On the contrary, China-US relations will be damaged or even regressed, which is not in line with the fundamental interests and common aspirations of the Chinese and American peoples.

Resolution 2758: Restoration of the lawful rights of the People's Republic of China in the United Nations

There is only one China in the world, and Taiwan is part of China. The Government of the People's Republic of China is the sole legal government representing the entire China. This is at the heart of the one-China principle and also a universal consensus of the international community and a basic norm in international relations. In October 1971, the 26th Session of the United Nations General Assembly adopted Resolution 2758, which "decides to restore all its rights to the People's Republic of China and to recognize the representatives of its Government as the only legitimate representatives of China to the United Nations, and to expel forthwith the representatives of Chiang Kai-shek from the place which they unlawfully occupy at the United Nations and in all the organizations related to it." A total of 181 countries, including the US, have established diplomatic ties with China on the basis of the one-China principle.
